

A Salute To Our Corn Producers

This special section is sponsored by the Nebraska Corn Board, The Hebron Journal-Register and local advertisers.

Farmers always looking to improve production methods

Think beef production is important to Nebraska? How about this: There's nearly four head of cattle fed in Nebraska each year for every man, woman and child living in the state. That's a lot of beef.

Yet Nebraska also ranks sixth in the nation in hog production and is in the top ten for laying hens. All told, about half of Nebraska's farm operations also raise livestock or poultry, and a vast majority of all farms are owned and operated by farm families.

Jon Holzfaster, who raises cattle and corn on his family's land near Paxton, Neb., said the generations of families who raise livestock — and feed for those livestock — continue to discover better ways to raise cattle and produce corn.

"We never stop learning. Every year we figure out something new and drive change," said Holzfaster, who is a member of the Nebraska Corn Board.

This notion of continuous improvement is key to Nebraska's position in food production in the United States and globally, Holzfaster explained.

"It also ties directly to the economic success of farm families, rural communities and the state as a whole, plus the thousands of Nebraskans whose jobs tie back to agriculture," he said. "We wouldn't be the second-largest cattle on feed state and third largest corn producing state in the country if the state's farmers and ranchers didn't work to get better."

Kelsey Pope, director of advocacy and outreach for the Nebraska Corn Board, said farmers must evolve to stay viable and be successful.

"Production methods change, technology changes, and the products consumers want also change," she said. "In the end, farmers work hard to deliver on all fronts."

For corn production, farmers today have access to seeds derived through biotechnology and conventional breeding to grow stronger and more resilient crops. That helps protect yields and prevent insects from eating and damaging the crop. For example, during a drought year like 2012, keeping corn roots healthy helps them grow deep into the soil to reach more water and produce a better crop.

"Corn farmers today utilize a number of tools to sustainably produce more corn per acre," Pope said. "Seeds are important, but so is GPS technology that allows farmers to put the right nutrients in the right place for the plants, and that can vary from field to field or even within a field."

For livestock producers, it means keeping animals from getting sick by ensuring they have access to quality feed, proper nutrition and clean water. By keeping animals healthy, farmers and ranchers know those animals will produce the affordable, lean cuts of beef and pork consumers prefer.

"I want to do a good job. Farmers want to do a good job," Holzfaster said. "Nebraska and American agriculture have always set and achieved high standards. Yet we know there is more we can do and that's why we're in a mode of continuous improvement, year after year. Tomorrow's corn crop, tomorrow's beef will be even more sustainable than it is today."

RU cool 2 flex fuel?

Check your owner's manual to see if you're driving a Flex Fuel Vehicle (FFV). Many FFVs also have yellow gas caps or have an insignia on the exterior of the vehicle.

About one in ten vehicles in Nebraska are Flex Fuel Vehicles (FFVs)—and many owners don't even know they are driving one.

Driving a Flex Fuel Vehicle means you can fill up with any blend of ethanol and gasoline—from 100% ordinary unleaded gasoline for E10 unleaded all the way up to 85% ethanol (E85). A computer in the engine automatically adjusts for the ratio of ethanol and gasoline, allowing drivers to fill up with any blend—at any time—in any amount.

An FFV is fully covered under warranty to use any percentage of gasoline and/or ethanol, up to 85% ethanol. That's what makes the vehicle "flexible." You can fill up with one fuel blend one time, and with another the next—and you don't have to wait for your tank to be empty to do so.

How can you learn if you're driving an FFV? Check your owner's manual—or see if you have a Flex Fuel insignia on your vehicle or on your gas cap. Every domestic automaker and several foreign manufacturers offer Flex Fuel Vehicles from passenger cars to SUVs, from vans to pickups.

"A Flex Fuel Vehicle gives consumers the ultimate in choice when it comes to filling up—from 100% ordinary unleaded gasoline to E10 to E15 to E40 to E85," said Kim Clark, director of biofuels development for the Nebraska Corn Board. "The more ethanol we use in our fuel, the less we depend on oil imports which threaten our nation's economy and energy security."

Feed High Quality Hay After Calving

Good cow nutrition is crucial from calving time until cows are rebred. Let's review some guidelines to make sure we do the job right.

Cows need good feed after calving. Each cow experiences much stress after calving because she is producing milk for her calf and she is preparing her reproductive system to rebreed. As a result, nutrient demands are high. Energy requirements increase about 30 percent and protein needs nearly double after calving. Underfeeding reduces the amount of milk she provides her calf, and it can delay or even prevent rebreeding. If it gets cold, wet, or icy again, nutrient demands can skyrocket.

Winter grass, corn stalks, and other crop residues are low quality right now because these feeds are weathered and have been pretty well picked over. So it is critical that the hay or silage you feed will provide the extra nutrients your cows need.

Not just any hay or silage will do. Your cow needs 10 to 12 percent crude protein and 60 to 65 percent TDN in her total diet. If she is grazing poor quality feeds, your forage and supplements must make up any deficiencies.

Make sure your forage has adequate nutrients; if you haven't done so, get it tested now for protein and energy content.

Also determine the nutrient requirements of your cows. Then feed your cows a ration that will meet their requirements. But don't overfeed, either. That is wasteful and expensive.

In summary, avoid underfeeding after calving; it can delay rebreeding and slow down calf growth. Use good quality forages to provide adequate nutrition. Your cows will milk well, rebreed on time, and produce healthy calves year after year.

Corn prices, food costs mostly unrelated Nebraska and much of the country's farmers were looking at record crops at the end of May. Just a few weeks later that changed and the conversation shifted from how terrible the drought was for farmers to how it may cost everyone more to buy food next year.

Reports that food prices were going to "skyrocket" tended to put the blame on higher priced corn - not the drought.

Yet that begs the question: Is corn really that much of a driver in food prices?

Certainly, corn is in many foods, but it makes up a very small part of most foods and an even smaller portion of what shoppers pay at the store. Corn flakes are a perfect example. When corn is $5.00 per bushel, there's only about 7 cents worth of corn in an 18-ounce box of cereal. When corn prices jumped to $8.00 during the summer, the value of the corn in that cereal box only increased to about 11 cents.

In other words, $2 spent on a lottery ticket could buy enough corn to make 18 boxes of cereal.

The reality is, the diesel fuel needed to deliver a semi-load of corn flakes to the store costs more than the corn in the box. When combined with all the other expenses involved in making and marketing the cereal, it's easier to see how the price of corn has little impact on a box of cereal that costs $3.50 or more in the store. Energy and oil prices especially have a significant impact on food prices.

"While the drought certainly is impacting corn and corn prices, it's also impacting every sector of agriculture," said Tim Scheer, a farmer from St. Paul and chairman of the Nebraska Corn Board. "Farmers who rely on pasture and hay are facing significant difficulties. That's critical for cattle producers because 70 percent of beef cattle's growth is forage-based."

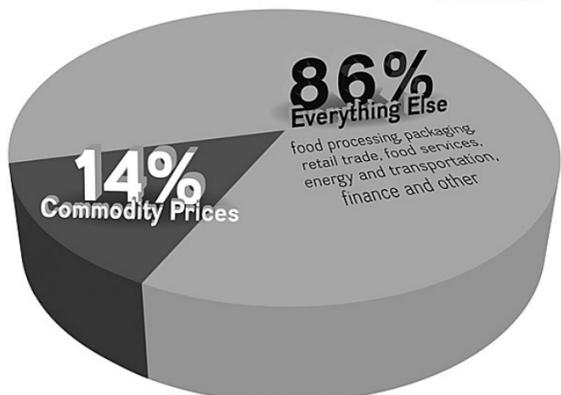

Other products that make up livestock feed are also priced higher because of the drought, making feed costs a challenge for livestock producers. "It's not just corn, it's not just hay. It's just about everything," Scheer said. "Unfortunately that's what happens during a drought, and it is likely meat prices will move higher at a greater percentage than other foods next year because of that."

The same thing happened during the last widespread drought in 1988. Yet in the end, corn, like all commodities, has little impact on overall food prices. As the U.S. Department of Agriculture points out, commodity prices make up just 14 percent of the cost of food and despite the drought, food price inflation will be less in 2013 than it was in 2011.

"This just shows there is a lot going on that impacts the price of food. Yes, corn may be priced higher, but other commodities may be priced lower and offset that," Scheer said. "Saying high-priced corn is going to drive up the price of everyone's grocery bill oversimplifies things and certainly overstates corn's role in overall food prices, especially when high energy and oil prices impact every food product at every step of the process."

Evapotranspiration (ET) gauges, like the one shown here, let farmers know how much water corn plants have taken up from the soil and evaporated into the air. Watermark sensors keep track of how much water is available in the soil. Combined, these two technologies give an accurate picture of water use and reduces irrigation amounts, saving both water and the energy dollars to pump it.

Sensor network helping farmers manage water use

A network of sensors lets farmer Mark Jagels of Davenport know when he should water his corn crop and when it makes sense to wait a few days. This is key information because Jagels, who is also a member of the Nebraska Corn Board, wants to use the least amount of water possible but still produce a good crop.

When needed, supplemental water in most cases is delivered through a pivot — a large sprinkler. It's pretty common in Nebraska to see pivots providing water to corn during the summer. Nationally, though, only 11 percent of the corn crop receives supplemental water from irrigation. The rest relies only on rain.

Because Nebraska is unique in terms of irrigating corn, researchers in the state have done a lot of work to help farmers best manage this natural resource. That includes the network of sensors managed by the University of Nebraska that Jagels and other farmers follow online.

Some farmers, including Jagels, also install their own sensors so they can manage water use more specifically for their location. "The investment is worth it," he said, "because the cost of buying sensors is easily offset by leaving pivots shut down for longer periods of time."

The sensors used by Jagels and in the university network are watermark sensors and evapotranspiration, or ET, gauges.

Watermark sensors are buried in the soil at different depths and tell farmers how much moisture is available to their crop. ET gauges tell farmers how much water their corn crop is transpiring. Combined, these tools tell farmers how much water the plants are using and when they may need to irrigate.

Research using these tools has shown farmers how to reduce their water use up to 25 percent while still achieving good yields.

"When it's hot and sunny you want to believe it is drier than it is, that the crop is using more water," Jagels said. "We've learned that isn't always the case. The technology available today lets us know it's okay to wait a few more days before irrigating, and that saves money, energy and water, even in a drought year like 2012."

E15 next step in ethanol fuels

The first fuel pump offering E15 in Nebraska—a blend of 15% ethanol and 85% ordinary unleaded gasoline—opened in Lexington in November 2012. Promoters of renewable, domestically produced ethanol expect more to follow.

E15 has been approved for use in cars, light duty trucks and SUVs model year 2001 and newer. E15 can also be used in all Flex Fuel Vehicles, which operate on ethanol blends up to 85 percent ethanol (E85).

Nebraskans have been filling up on E10 Unleaded for decades. This blend of 10% ethanol and 90% ordinary unleaded gasoline is approved for use by every major automaker in the world—and it has had a dramatic effect on lowering America's dangerous and expensive addiction to imported oil.

Before E15 could make its way to a fuel pump, the fuel underwent extensive testing—some six million miles worth. "E15 is probably the most researched automotive fuel in history," said Kim Clark, director of biofuels development for the Nebraska Corn Board. "It has been proven safe for use in more than 120 million vehicles in the United States."

Ethanol plants produce key livestock feed ingredient

Ethanol plants in Nebraska are one of the biggest suppliers of a key feed ingredient to livestock producers across the state and other parts of the country.

Nebraska's ethanol plants take in corn and produce a lot of ethanol. In fact, about 2.8 gallons of ethanol are produced for every bushel of field corn they buy from nearby farmers. In total, ethanol plants in the state produce more than 2 billion gallons a year, making Nebraska the second-largest ethanol producing state in the country.

Yet the same plants also produce nearly 18 pounds of livestock feed from that bushel of corn, more than 6 million tons every year.

"That feed, distillers grains, is sold to local livestock producers or dried and shipped across the country," said Nebraska Corn Board member Dennis Gengenbach, a corn and cattle farmer from Smithfield. "Since ethanol is made from the starch in each kernel, distiller's grains is comprised of the other components, which makes it high in fiber and protein and an excellent feed ingredient."

In fact, it's sought after by livestock producers, especially cattle producers.

Some ethanol plants also extract a portion of the corn oil from each kernel. This non-food grade oil is a great feed additive for poultry, but it can also be processed and converted to biodiesel.

All told, an ethanol plant is truly a biorefinery. A plant using 16 million bushels of corn to produce 45 million gallons of ethanol can also make 135,000 tons of low-oil distiller's grains and 12 million pounds of corn oil.

Who can use E15?

Light trucks and SUVs 2001 model year and newer that use gasoline

Blue Valley Care Home Nurse's Station Remodel Begins

EBS Construction of Fairbury workers begin installation of the new nurses' station at the Blue Valley Care Home in Hebron. Fund-raising for the project began in 2011.

After two years of planning, the Blue Valley Care Home Nurses' Station remodel has begun. Fund-raising for the project began in 2011, and raised more than $21,000 for the project. The need for the project arose due to changes being made in the medical field and the move toward digital record keeping.

The new nurse's station will allow staff a more private area to carry out charting and consultations with family and doctors. It will also allow for computers that will help make the move to digital record keeping.

The nurses' station was designed by architect, Rod Laucomer of Lincoln. The nurse's station was then assembled off-site by EBS Construction of Fairbury and will begin installation this week.

Three players, one manager, one umpire and a distinguished service nominee will be inducted into the Nebraska Baseball Hall of Fame (NEBHOF) during the organization's annual banquet, which will take place on Sunday, Feb. 10, in Beatrice. This year's inductees hail from Omaha, Lincoln and Beatrice. University of Nebraska-Lincoln head baseball coach and former Major League All-Star Darin Erstad, along with Friend's Thad Weber, will be special guests at the banquet at Aunt Mary's Restaurant in Beatrice, southwest corner of 8th and Court St. Doors will open at 4 p.m.

Bruning-Davenport/Shickley multi-sport stand-out Ryan Tegtmeier will be officially announced as the 2013 Nebraska Baseball Hall of Fame scholarship winner at the banquet. Ryan is the son of Rod and Judy Tegtmeier of Davenport. Ryan has played summer baseball with the Davenport/Edgar Junior and Senior Legion teams. As a freshman and sophomore on the junior squad, the team was state runner-up and third at the state finals.

Talented, hard-throwing, semi-pro pitching ace Howard "Smokey" Molden, Lincoln, and Omaha businessman Joe Siwa will be inducted into the NEBHOF this year. Siwa, a New York native, played professionally for four years in the Minnesota Twins organization. Also being honored for his playing prowess is Everett "Pid" Purdey of Beatrice. Purdey, who passed away in 1951, played one season with the Chicago White Sox and three years with the Cincinnati Reds. He was a lifetime .293 hitter in the Big Leagues. He also played several seasons with the Green Bay Packers.

Omaha businessman Mike Zahm is being inducted for his umpiring career in Nebraska, including work in the Big 8 and Big 12. Omaha businessman Bill Olson is being inducted into the hall for his accomplishments as a manager. While at Omaha Northwest High School, Olson guided the Huskies to a 53-game win streak and four straight State Championships. This period of dominance was fueled by Olson's son Gregg, who would go on to earn a place in the Baltimore Oriole's Hall of Fame during his 14-year Major League career. Olson's teams earned six State Championships in all. Bob Lohrborg of Lincoln, a former Husker baseball player, is very instrumental in the Nebraska Semi-Pro Baseball Organization and will be honored for his distinguished service.

Activities begin on Feb. 10 at 4 p.m. At 4:30 p.m., the autograph session will begin with Erstad and Weber of the San Diego Padres. All proceeds from the autograph session will be donated to the American Cancer Society. The NEBHOF has honored players, coaches and umpires since 1971. Tours of the new, permanent home of the NEBHOF will also be available on Feb. 10. Several sections in the restaurant in Beatrice have been remodeled for use by the NEBHOF. Pictures and memorabilia at the hall honor those who have excelled in baseball in Nebraska. For more information about the NEBHOF or to inquire about tickets for this year's banquet, contact Larry Bornschlegl at 402-463-1071 or by email at lborsch@yahoo.com.

CROSSROADS CONFERENCE

BDS Eagles win CRC championship

Bruning-Davenport/Shickley's Ryan Tegtmeier gets double-teamed Thursday night as he led the Eagles to a semi-final victory over High Plains. The Eagles went on to win the Crossroads Conference championship the next night.

The BDS Eagles boys basketball team took home their second Crossroads Conference title in three years after defeating Giltner, 47-40, to avenge a loss they had at the hands of the Hornets earlier in the season.

The victory came largely on the hot shooting hand of senior Ryan Tegtmeier who established a CRC single game record by hitting 16-of-17 free throws enroute to the victory. "It seemed like they decided that he wasn't going to get any easy looks, so they played physical and put him on the line," commented head coach Fred Kluck. "That works for us too. He's shooting about 90 percent for the year on his free throws."

The game looked like a run away early as the Eagles jumped out to a 15-4 lead at the end of the first quarter and built the margin to 24-9 midway through the second. But the Hornets came roaring back to take a one point lead midway in the third period. "They're too good a team to just let us dictate the tempo the entire way," said Kluck.

Riley Tegtmeier came off the bench to provide some ball handling and hustle, and a trio of other freshmen also provided some much needed rest for the starters when they wore down early in the game.

"Ben Elznic, Sam Christensen, and Cody Garland can all play defense and give the starters a minute or two to catch their breath, especially early in the game," said Kluck. "That really pays off down the stretch in a close one like this."

Tegtmeier led the way scoring 28 points, while Grant Norder added 8. Luke Christensen who joined both Ryan and Grant on the all tournament team finished with six despite spraining an ankle early in the first period, and Riley Tegtmeier and Chris Rohr added three and two points respectively. Rohr also pulled down a game high nine rebounds.

Despite being outscored from the field, the Eagles shot 20-for-24 free throws, while Giltner finished just 4 of 12.

In the semifinal game the night before, BDS defeated the 13-2 top-seeded High Plains Storm, 56-47. The Eagles came out firing early and led after one quarter 15-9. They pushed the lead to seven by halftime, leading at the break 26-19.

Chris Rohr sparked the team early scoring five first period points enroute to his total for the game of eight, along with seven rebounds. Fellow sophomore Grant Norder also stepped up his game with a well balanced 14 points while scoring in all four quarters and going 6-for-6 from the free throw line.

The third 1/4 saw the Eagles maintain their lead and enter the final period with a 38-31 cushion. In the fourth the Storm couldn't get any closer as BDS put the game away at the free throw line going 14-of-17 to ice the game and move on to the finals with a 56-47 victory. In addition to Rohr and Norder, Ryan Tegtmeier scored a game high 20 points and pulled down 12 rebounds. Luke Christensen added six, Riley Tegtmeier five and Joel Schardt scored three.

On Tuesday, the fourth-seeded Eagles faced a familiar foe in the fifth-seeded McCool Junction Mustangs. The two teams faced each other one week earlier at McCool.

The week before a short handed McCool team had gone down to defeat, but this time they were at full strength and appeared ready to avenge the earlier loss. "It's never good to have to play a team twice in a week," commented Coach Kluck. "When you see a team that soon the advantage almost always goes to the team that just lost."

While the Eagles held a 22-16 half time lead, it quickly evaporated as the Mustangs got hot and jumped out to a 36-28 edge with just seconds remaining in the third period. "That was when BDS started to fight their way back," Coach Kluck said. Ryan Tegtmeier took an inbound pass, drove it the length of the court and after a slight hesitation move, buried a 3-point shot as the buzzer sounded to end the quarter.

"That was an enormous turning point for us," said Kluck. "If Ryan doesn't hit that we go into the fourth down 8 and with a lot of uncertainty about whether or not we can get the momentum back. In one quick swing he got it all back and gave us the lift we needed to go after them in the fourth."

The Eagles did just that quickly turning the five-point deficit into a one-point lead as Grant Norder and Luke Christensen hit back to back treys to open the period. Ryan soon added another and junior Wyatt Schoenholz stepped up big on the defensive end taking on the responsibility of trying to slow down McCool's leading scorer by holding him to just one point in the fourth to help seal the victory. The Eagles scored the final four points at the line and held on for a 50-46 win.

Ryan Tegtmeier led in scoring with 22, Luke Christensen and Grant Norder each had 11. Luke also established a new BDS record by taking three charges in the game. Riley Tegtmeier added four points and Joel Schardt rounded out the scoring with two.

Lady Eagles

The Lady Eagles ended the CRC in fourth place after going 1-2 in the series of games.

In the win against Cross County, Coach Shana Gerberding said Cross County came out shooting lights out hitting five three-pointers to take an early lead. "But, the fourth quarter belonged to us," she said, "as the girls scored 25 points to Cross County's 16. That sealed the win for us."

Christy Swartzendruber and Jennifer Mick led the way with 18 and 17 points respectively. Swartzendruber also had 11 rebounds while Jill Schroeder had six rebounds and Jacie Hoins provided three assists.

In the loss against Giltner, the squad played from behind most of the night, but kept up a good fight breaking a CRC record for most made three-point shots in a game with 10.

Thayer Central's Megan Bulin avoids a block earlier this season. In a win against Centennial last week, Bulin scored 12 points.

Titans

Thayer Central pulled out its tenth victory on the season after defeating Centennial, 58-44, Friday night at home. The Titans used a steady, consistent attack over four periods of the game to claim the win.

"Our game was possibly our best all-around four-quarter effort of the year so far," said Thayer Central coach Clint Havel. "We played defense exactly the way we had prepared all week limiting their best players to less than their yearly scoring averages. We were also able to push the ball up and down the court making it easier for our offense to get points."

Four Titans scored in double digits to lead the way including Trent Tietjen with 16, Russ Heitmann with 11 and Brian Loontjer and Greg Dightman with 10 each.

The team was good for 23-of-50 total shots, or 46 percent in shooting. "That is our season best," the coach said. "Limiting our turnovers had a big impact on our ability to score, too, and we were able to position ourselves for some easy looks."

On defense, Trent Tietjen controlled the boards pulling down seven rebounds to stop Centennial's vie for points. He also grabbed two offensive rebounds in the effort while collecting a couple of steals and providing one block.

Macaulay Mumm snagged five of the team's 16 defensive rebounds and provided two assists and a steal while Russ Heitmann provided three assists and snagged three steals. Brian Loontjer also provided three assists while grabbing three offensive rebounds and Jay Cottam had eight points, three assists and one steal. Trev Mumm collected three rebounds and provided two assists.

The Titans opened the Southern Nebraska Conference tournament Tuesday night at home. Seeded 4th, the Thayer Central squad took on No. 5 Wilber-Clatonia. Results will be published here on the Sports page next week.

Lady Titans

The Lady Titans picked up their third win of the season after defeating Centennial, 48-33, Friday night at home.

"I felt our girls played very well in getting a win before we opened up the first round of the Southern Nebraska Conference Monday night," said Thayer Central coach Andy Long. "The team did a good job of rebounding on the defensive side which limited Centennial's second chances for baskets."

The Titans squeaked ahead by one point to close the first quarter, 13-12, but commanded the second and third quarters shooting 13-4 in both cases.

Bridgette Baden led the effort scoring 16 of her total 18 points in the first half of the game while Megan Bulin added 12 points and six rebounds.

"Another area we've seen great improvement over the last six games is in free throw shooting," Coach Long said. "In this game we connected on 70 percent of our chances from the charity stripe."

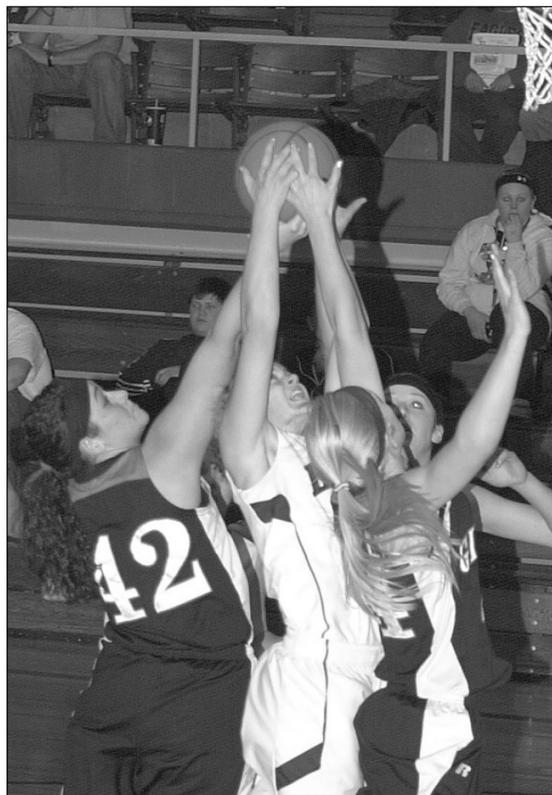

On Monday night in the first round of the Southern Nebraska Conference, No. 7 seed Thayer Central dropped its contention to No. 10 David City, 26-42. The game, played at home, ended Thayer Central's competition in the tournament.

The Titans have two regular season games remaining on the schedule including Wilber-Clatonia on Feb. 5 and Southern on Feb. 8. Both games are on the road.

Christy Swartzendruber (white jersey) attempts a rebound under duress last week as the BDS Lady Eagles went up against Giltner in the semifinals of the Crossroads Conference tournament at York. The squad broke a CRC record for most three-point shots made in a single game with 10 against Giltner.

Wrestlers wrap up regular season

The Thayer Central wrestling team traveled to Red Cloud Saturday to compete in the Red Cloud/Blue Hill to compete in the final regular meet of the season. The squad finished seventh.

"I think we took a little step back this week," said Thayer Central coach Brett Larson. "We didn't have the consistency that we have had the last couple of weeks. We had a couple of matches in there that I feel we should have won if we wrestled our match and controlled the action. We were only 12 points out of third, but finishing seventh was not what I expected and not what we expected as a team."

According to wrestling results at trackwrestling.com, Clayton Hintz led the way gaining the championship of the 138 weight division after defeating Tanner Ruprecht of the hosting team 8-1. The senior wrestler went 4-0 on the day.

Jamie Lange, wrestling at 132, went 3-1 on the day for a second place finish. Lange was pinned in the championship round by Chase Prester of Russell.

Dalton Kenning and Cody Krula finished third in their respective divisions. Kenning, wrestling at 145, went 3-1 on the day after pinning Josh Street of Lincoln High School in the consolation match and Krula, wrestling at 152, went 2-1 on the day after pinning Devan Ritner of Wilcox-Hildreth in the consolation final.

Other wrestlers competing at the Red Cloud/Blue Hill meet along with their weight divisions and match finishes for the day include: 106-Kylea HIntz (0-2); 113-Jayden Dightman (1-1); 126-Justin Criner (1-2); 132-Ali Ashmore (0-2); 132-Adam Hellbusch (1-2); 138-Tyler Edwards (2-2); 160-Tyler Hergott (0-2); 182-Judd Holtzclaw (0-2); 195-Brian Kovacs (0-2); 220-Colton Fangmeier (-0-2).

The Titans head to Centennial this Friday for the Southern Nebraska Conference tournament. "I expect us to wrestle much better and control the mat with our wrestling," the coach said.

Prior to the meet, the junior varsity wrestlers will head to the Ground Hog tourney on Thursday. "I know the JV kids are excited to wrestle and wrap up a good season. They have all improved a lot since November," the coach said.

Thayer Central sophomore Jay Cottam (white jersey) goes up against a Heartland defender in a game earlier this season. Cottam was able to score eight points as the Titans picked up their tenth win on the season against Centennial last week. The team headed into Southern Nebraska Conference competition Tuesday night at home as they faced Wilber-Clatonia. The tourney continues through Saturday.
